Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

NEVER have the high purpose and the integrity of the Roosevelt administration been more clearly upheld than in today's decision by the Supreme Court of the United States declaring that the Tennessee Valley Authority has the constitutional right to sell electricity produced at the government's hydro-power dams.

Ruffin White to Be Candidate for Hempstead Judge

Fires Opening Gun in 1936 County Political Campaign

RAN SIX YEARS AGO

Farmer for 16 Years, He Pledges Efficient Administration

The opening gun in the 1936 Hempstead county political campaign boomed Monday with the announcement that Ruffin White, well-known Hope man, would be a candidate for county and probate judge. His announcement appears in today's political announcement column.

Mr. White made the race for county judge six years ago and received a substantial vote. He came out third in a field of five candidates for the office.

Born and reared in Hempstead county, Mr. White attended Hope High School and was graduated from that institution. He later attended Arkansas college at Batesville. Leaving Batesville he matriculated at Jonesboro A. & M. college and was graduated from that school.

He returned to his native Hempstead county to make his home. He has resided on a farm near Hope for the past 16 years.

In making his announcement, Mr. White said that he had never held public office other than to serve as justice of the peace.

In his statement he said: "Not knowing what the future may bring I am elected I will endeavor to solve the problems that will arise from day to day to the best interests of the people of Hempstead county."

"I was in the race for county judge six years ago. I received a good vote for which I am grateful. I am now asking the voters to consider my candidacy in the coming campaign."

"I elected I pledge to the people that I will conduct the office in an efficient, orderly and a forthright manner and to the best interests of all concerned," Mr. White concluded.

The "Dry" Side Timberlake Closes the Campaign for Prohibition Side

Declares Opposition Call "Drys" a "Pack of Blatant Fools"

RECALLS M'COLLUM

Only Issue Is Abolition of Legal Sale of Liquor as Beverage

This concludes the prohibitionists' newspaper campaign, directed from the office of John P. Vesey. The Star's series of twelve editorial discussions ended Saturday—giving the prohibitionists "the last word" today.

By JOHN C. TIMBERLAKE

What is the issue in the election staged for Hempstead county in the near future?

There are those who would have you believe that it is a question of sanity, or insanity. They will try to prove by arithmetic that all prohibitionists who want the liquor regime overturned in this county are a pack of blatant fools. They will be telling you that all the churches, decent ministers, and W. C. T. U. women are a hopeless lot of silly people who have no sense enough to know what they want, nor ability to locate real issues.

Let them say on. Within the memory of living men that same gang was saying these hard things about Judge J. H. McCollum, who went over this county, and the City of Hope and got a petition signed asking the proper authorities to abolish the legalized liquor traffic in this community. But they haven't hesitated in defaming the dead. Those who have opposed this vile traffic have always been derided by the liquor gang. They will tell you that it is not a question of liquor or no liquor in this county. What we are aiming at is the abolition of the legal sale of this poison as a beverage in this county.

We are willing to trust the county and district officers with the enforcement of the law when we write it on our ballots on the books. We did it before. We are willing to do it again. We are willing to do it again, living in this county by stealing from decent people. Every circuit court is piled up with such law-breakers. Now is as plain as day that the issue in such cases is not as to whether those from whom the hogs were stolen shall cease to have hogs around so these thieves will not be tempted to steal.

In Nevada County.

But such an attitude will be a parallel with the one made in Nevada county by the wets when one of the "poison sellers" came out in the open and said he intended to sell liquor in Prescott, no matter how the election went. He was a bootlegger before the dry law was repealed, and has not changed since for the better. He sells more liquor now than ever, or did before the law was changed by the majority up there.

It is no new thing for the apologists of these poison sellers to seek to cloud the issue. They will do it every time. In their estimation the issue is not sobriety and decency, as we say it is. It is just a question of whether this poison shall be sold by bootleggers, or whether the law against the sale of such stuff is taken from the statutes and the state made a party to such a crime. This is their position, Judge McCollum, and he and his helpers went right on and got the liquor laws repealed and put the saloons out of Hope. We think he was right. We think all who helped him were right. All people who are unwilling to surrender to these foul poison sellers are thinking the same things now. Let us be ready to vote what we think, and not allow these poison sellers who fatten on the money that women and children ought to have to do our thinking for us.

A Prescott Case

While we were in the battle in Prescott, a certain lawyer was called from the prison to come down and get a man out of jail. This is what was found. A farmer who has a wife and several children living down in the worst section of the drought stricken part of the county had made one sale of cotton and brought it to town to sell it and get shoes for his wife and children, and some other things they were badly in need of. He sold the cotton, got the money, and made a rush for one of the poison stores. He had the money was gone, and all they had worked so hard for in hope of having a bit of the necessities of life was gone too. This is the thing our wet friends want to perpetuate. It is believable that this man spent fifty dollars for poison and drank it all up in one day? The wets want to (Continued on page three)

Right of Government to Sell TVA Power Upheld by United States Supreme Court

Vast extent of the TVA project, for power supply, flood control, and navigation, is graphically shown on this map, prepared by Tennessee Valley Authority engineers, on which are given locations of the mighty dams, the cities to which power will flow, the transmission lines, and the valuable mineral deposits. Generators now are turning at one dam—Wilson, on the Tennessee river—sending power to Tennessee and Mississippi cities. Giant transmission lines are under construction from Norris Dam, nearing completion on the Clinch river, 400 miles upstream from Wilson. Fifteen miles above Wilson Dam, work is being rushed on Wheeler Dam, and three other great barriers are included in the TVA project—at Aurora, near the Tennessee's mouth, at Pickwick Landing, and on the Tennessee, which flows into the Tennessee above Chattanooga.

J. L. Williams Co. Open 3 New Mills

Sawmills in Southern Part of County Employing 40 Additional Men

The opening of three new mills in Hempstead county in addition to the Hope mill was announced Monday by J. L. Williams & Sons, sawmill and building material concern.

The new plants will add 40 men to the industrial payroll of the county. One of the mills is located in the southeast corner of the county, and the other two are in the southern part. A steady growth in business accounts for this expansion, a company official said Monday.

White Paper for South Is Assured

Manufacture of Newsprint From Pine Finally Underwritten

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn.—(P)—James G. Stahlman, publisher of the Nashville Banner, reported to the Southern Newspapers Publishers' Association that definite plans are under way to manufacture newsprint in the South from Southern pine.

Stahlman said enough contracts had been underwritten to keep a mill in operation for five years. It was pointed out that the newspaper publishers will have no part in the organizing and operation of the plant, leaving that to private industry.

The board voted to hold the annual convention of the Association in Asheville, N. C., May 18-20.

Bulletins

LONDON, Eng.—(Copyright Associated Press)—Great Britain's fighting forces asked the House of Commons Monday for about 39 million dollars additional appropriation for this year, most of which would be expended "upon special measures taken in connection with the Italy-Ethiopia dispute."

WASHINGTON—(P)—A resolution for a congressional investigation of the Townsend and other old age pension movements was approved Monday by the house rules committee.

MADRID, Spain.—(P)—A state of alarm, to last eight days, was declared throughout Spain Monday following the death of six persons in Sunday's general election.

Court's Decision Monday Is Nearly Unanimous, by 8 to 1

And Arkansas State Supreme Court Holds That Cities May Pledge Municipal Plant Revenue for Construction Costs

WASHINGTON—(P)—The government won a major victory in the Supreme Court of the United States Monday when the justices held that the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) could dispose of surplus power manufactured at the Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals.

The decision, which did not reach constitutionality of the TVA as a whole, upheld the right of the government to dispose of surplus power from dams constructed for purposes of navigation control or national defense.

In an eight-to-one decision, Mr. Reynolds dissenting, the court held that the construction of Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals was constitutional and that government purchase of transmission lines from the Alabama Power company to distribute energy was also valid.

The minority opinion contended that the court should have dismissed the case.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes asserted that authority to dispose of property constitutionally acquired is specifically provided in the constitution itself.

Market Is Affected
NEW YORK—(P)—A huge buying wave in electrical power issues was quickly followed by a flood of selling in the New York stock and bond exchanges Monday, during Chief Justice Hughes' reading of the TVA decision.

Cities Get Authority
LITTLE ROCK—(P)—The Arkansas Supreme Court upheld Monday the authority of cities of the first and second class to pledge the revenue from proposed municipal utility plants to pay for indebtedness to be incurred in constructing them.

The decision affirmed a Greene chancery ruling denying an injunction to B. M. Kitchens, who sought to restrain the City of Paragould from pledging the income from a proposed $200,000 municipal light plant to pay off the bonded indebtedness.

3 Negroes Taken in 'Shiner Raid'

County and City Officers Co-operate in Liquor Raids

Three gallons of moonshine liquor were seized in raids here Saturday by city and county officers. Three negroes were arrested.

They are: Dolly Straighter, negro woman, and Mann Straighter and John Johnson, negro men. The negro woman is charged with possession of illegal liquor for purpose of sale.

The two negro men are facing charges of possessing and transporting illegal liquor. Participating officers were: Sheriff Jim Bearden, Deputy Sheriff R. O. Robins, and John Turner and Hugh Bearden of the city police force.

AAA Substitute Is Passed by Senate

1-2-Billion-Dollar Measure Is Based on Soil Conservation

WASHINGTON—(P)—The senate Monday passed an appropriation bill carrying $2,880,751,000, including $1,730,000,000 to pay the bonus, $440,000,000 for the new soil subsidy farm program, and $879,000,000 to run the independent offices of the government in the next fiscal year.

AAA Substitute Passes
WASHINGTON—(P)—Overcoming opposition by an almost three-to-one margin, administration forces over the week-end won senate passage of the $500,000,000 soil conservation—subsidy AAA bill.

The bill now goes to the house. The senate vote, claiming 11 days of debate, during which the measure's constitutionality was challenged and defended, was 56 to 20.

Supporters argued it was constitutional under the supreme court's interpretation of congress' appropriating authority in its decision killing the AAA, which the soil bill is intended to replace.

The bill, introduced by Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, as a substitute for a somewhat similar measure by Senator Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, would authorize expenditure of $500,000,000 in federal subsidies to farmers, based on their acreage of crop land, soil-improving and erosion-preventing crops, changes in farming practices, and a percentage of normal production entering domestic channels.

After two years, permanent state-aid plans with the same objective would become operative in any state whose legislature approved a formula prepared by the Secretary of Agriculture. States could join the permanent system at any time during operation of the temporary plan. No aid would be given after January 1, 1938, in any state whose legislature had not adopted a plan.

Although the Secretary of Agriculture would have unlimited authority in measuring grants, an amendment by Senator Clark, Democrat, Missouri, which was approved, would prohibit the aid from exceeding the $500,000,000 authorization in any one year.

Old Cavern of Cave Man Found in Spain

ALICANTE, Spain.—(P)—A huge prehistoric cavern, apparently once inhabited by primitive men, has been discovered near here by Father Jose Belda, noted as an archeologist.

The cavern contains extensive galleries at a depth of about 300 feet at the end of which is an enormous chamber with many signs of habitation. In the cavern is a precipice 600 feet deep in which there is a large lake.

Light filters to every part of the galleries and cavern through crevices.

In the cavern were found vases, bones and quantities of ashes. Hundreds of bell shaped vases indicated the site of an ancient pottery.

No City Court
Municipal court was not in session here Monday, all cases being set for trial next Monday, February 24.

Municipal Judge W. K. Loney has been out of the state the past few days.

Vote on Package Store Law to Be County-Wide Test

Polls to Be Open Tuesday From Sunup to Sundown

LAW SINCE MARCH

Thorn Bill Ended 19 Years of Prohibition on March 16, 1935

Voters of Hempstead county will go to the polls Tuesday to decide the fate of the Thorn package-liquor store law in a local option election.

Polls over Hempstead county will open at sunup and will close at sundown. The counting of votes will start immediately after the polls close.

Voting Places
The voting places in DeRoan township will be:
Ward One—Arkansas Bank & Trust Co. building.
Ward Two—Frisco depot.
Ward Three—556 Service Station.
Ward Four—City Hall.
County Box 5—Hempstead County Lumber Co.

According to poll tax receipts, 3,196 persons in the county are eligible to vote, approximately 1,100 of which are residents of DeRoan township.

Negros of the county are eligible to vote if qualified, as this is a special general election, according to the election commissioners.

A two-weeks speaking campaign by the dry forces closed Sunday afternoon with a county-wide political rally at the Hope city hall in which O. A. Graves, W. S. Atkins, and W. J. Tompkins delivered addresses.

History of the Fight
In brief, here is the history of legal liquor in Hempstead county:
The Thorn package law, signed by Governor Futrell on Saturday, March 16, 1935, ending 19 years of statutory prohibition.

Sales over the state became legal a week later with the issuance of license and tax stamps by Revenue Commissioner Earl R. Wiseman.

The Hope city council drew up an ordinance for enforcement of the law, fixing an annual tax of $200 for retailers and $350 for wholesalers. Hours for sale were fixed at 7 a. m. to 10 p. m.

The first legal sales in Hempstead county were made last March 28 when J. C. Porterfield obtained the first license in the county.

Petition Is Begun
In November of last year 16 Hempstead county minister and three attorneys called a county-wide mass meeting for the purpose of circulating petitions over Hempstead county asking for a local option liquor election.

Several proli meetings were scheduled, the first to be addressed by the Rev. Arden P. Blaylock of Little Rock.

A few days later, November 11, the prohibition forces attempted to put the Hempstead County Quorum Court on record as opposing the state liquor referendum. The attempt, however, was blocked when the justices tabled the resolution by 12 votes to 10.

A. H. Washburn, a justice of the peace from DeRoan township, and A. J. Lafferty, justice from Patmos, spoke against the resolution.

Dr. F. O. Wood, justice from DeRoan, Sheriff Jim Bearden, Attorney W. S. Atkins and the Rev. Wallace R. Rogers spoke in behalf of the resolution. The vote for adoption failed, 12 to 10.

Petition Granted
Early in January a completed petition asking for a local option election was submitted in the Hempstead county court and was granted by County Judge H. M. Stephens. The legality of the petition was not questioned.

February 18 was set as the date for the election. During the past two weeks a speaking campaign by the dry forces has been conducted in practically every section of the county.

An editorial campaign conducted by A. H. Washburn, publisher of The Star, favored a state dispensary—urging retention of the present law to force a compromise on the dispensary plan.

Fewer Accidents Than Last Year

Total of 872 Killed in 1936, Against 1,014 Same Period '35

By the Associated Press
Automobile accidents over the week-end killed at least 42 persons as reports from Washington indicated a substantial reduction in traffic fatalities in the first six weeks of the year as compared with the same period in 1935.

The Department of Commerce said 872 had been killed in 88 major cities so far this year as against 1,014 during the first six weeks of last year.

California led the states in week-end deaths with seven, Illinois and Georgia reported four each. Other deaths by states:

Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas, three each; Louisiana, Florida, Arkansas, Washington and Tennessee, two each; District of Columbia, Ohio, Minnesota, Missouri, Arizona, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania and New York, one each.

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

A high roughage diet is practically never recommended by doctors in diseases of the stomach. The chief value of roughage lies in the control of that type of constipation or lazy bowel action due to insufficient bulk in waste matter passing from the body.

You can get all the roughage you need by adding extra green vegetables and fruits to your diet. If you need still more roughage, various bran products are sometimes recommended.

In correction of the type of lazy bowel action described above, be certain that a regular time is established for action of the bowels. You must also take plenty of water—at least eight glasses a day.

It is not wise to form the habit of stimulating the bowel action by taking cathartics or enemas daily. These should not be taken except on advice of a doctor.

The usual roughage diet is one containing plenty of fruits and vegetables—in other words, at least 800 grams a day.

Today's Health Question—What is cardiac neurosis?

Cardiac neurosis is a condition in which a person has developed an anxious state of mind over the belief that he is suffering from heart disease when in reality the anxiety is usually created by the lack of palpitation or skipped beats, which may be due to gaseous distention of the stomach, to overindulgence in tobacco, tea, or coffee, or to excesses of various kinds.

When the palpitation or irregularity is due to organic disease of the heart or to certain poisons from within the body, such as that of toxic goiter, the term cardiac neurosis does not apply.

Fruit or fruit juices may be taken before meals or before going to bed. Here is a sample menu for the day which may be recommended for people who wish a diet with extra roughage:

Breakfast
Fruit, 2 large servings; whole grain cereal (if cereal is used); egg, bacon, ham or similar food; whole grain bread; butter; and hot beverages.

Luncheon
Cream soup, cottage cheese, or other protein food; vegetables, 2 or 3 servings; fruit, 1 large serving; whole grain bread; butter; and milk.

Dinner
Fruit, cup, grapefruit or melon; meat, fish or fowl; potato; other vegetables, 2 to 3 servings; salad; fruit or any dessert made with fruit; whole grain bread; butter; any beverage.

A Book a Day

By Bruce Catton

The world of books being what it is, it can be a great deal more profitable to spend some time with a re-issue of an old book than with a new issue of a new book; and this year will produce few, if any, biographies as good as "Stonewall Jackson," by G. F. R. Henderson.

This work was originally published in two volumes in 1898. Since then it has been accepted universally as "the" biography of the great Confederate soldier; and since it is now available in a new, one-volume edition, attention may properly be called to it here.

Sometime after Appomattox, a statue of Jackson was unveiled in New Orleans. A Confederate chaplain, offering prayer, used this expression: "When, in thine inscrutable decree, it was ordained that the Confederate should fall, it became necessary for thee to remove thy servant, Jackson." With this viewpoint Colonel Henderson seems to agree.

For Jackson, great strategist and great fighter, was the perfect implement for the expression of Lee's designs. With Jackson at his side, Lee never failed. Had Jackson been at Gettysburg, the South almost unquestionably would have won; and victory there would have been final.

It is the virtue of this book that it shows just how and why Jackson was such a matchless instrument in Lee's hand. You may know little about military matters; Colonel Henderson will explain all that is useful, and explain it in readable, interesting style. He also reveals Jackson, not as the dour fanatic some books show, but as a warmly human, lovable man.

Published by Longmans, Green and Co., "Stonewall Jackson" sells for $5.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Possibly no problem in child management has been more discussed than the tantrum. Many parents, however, continue to regard it as something abnormal.

The tantrum is not abnormal. It is merely anger generated by frustration. If this is abnormal, then all of us are kuer. What day passes without some form of rage besetting us? We may scream on the floor, but we lose our appetites, or get a headache or swear, according to our pattern.

The tantrum is rage expressed in the child's pattern. Maybe he has been overindulged, or his natural instincts to play (or acquire) have been too persistently thwarted, but there is a cause, be sure. In some children the cause may be very slight, once he is set in his habit.

At any rate, he explodes. He cannot talk himself into getting his way, so he stages it. Tiny children, like many older ones too, are not lawyers. They are not "articulate," which means lack of power to put your case. They have no silver-tongued terms to justify what they deem their rights.

Anger Delights Many Persons

Mothers today know pretty well how to deal with the tantrum child, for the moment. They let him alone, deny the prize he is working for, and even resort to the "faint" cure, cold water suddenly applied. But usually the breath-holder comes to very nicely when he finds himself neglected.

It is true that many tots never get over the tantrum habit. Long after they cease to be toddlers they continue to stage outrageous scenes.

It is also a fact that many of those who "appear" to be cured are not cured at all, but have merely changed tactics.

It is interesting to speculate on the number of people in the world who are entirely governed by anger. Anger is a perfectly delightful emotion, whether we think so or not. We love to be good and mad at everything and everybody. Sometimes we are justified, because righteous rage has a place. But the "habits" of hate, jealousy, chip-carrying, all blood brothers of rage, are different. We could discard them if we would, but we love them, so we hang on. Any psychologist can tell us that.

Life May Need Revamping
But, unlike joy or calm content, anger leaves a trail of misery in broken health, thin nerves, and other things. It never pays. Self-control does not mean merely holding in. That does not remove the emotion itself. Real self-control is a long, hard business of acquiring a quick substitution of another thought as quickly as possible and a new outlook that will eventually weaken the anger complex.

The tantrum child should not be merely neglected when he has his spasms. His whole routine of life may need revamping. Perhaps if he is kept busier he will sweeten up. Perhaps he needs to be put out more. Regularity of hours may change the picture. Maybe there is a teaser in the house. But, no matter or other, studied out by the mother, he needs to have his rage-habit undermined. The real cure depends on discovering the cause, if possible.

Glorifying Yourself

By Alicia Hart

New beauty aids that merit attention this week are a boon indeed to the girl who insists upon a bronzed bud, these are as a breath of spring, these are well within the reach of the average pocketbook.

For instance, a new perfume, reasonable in price, does away with the problems about what is good for day-time, which for evening and how to find something which suits your particular type. It is good any time of day or night and can be used by blondes, redheads and brunettes, brunettes, whether plump, thin, tall or short. If you insist on a bottle of this, you can cross perfume off your shopping list until the bottle is empty.

Then there's a magical cosmetic kit containing every item needed for a complete makeup and retouching for a comparatively small sum. Included in it are face powder, cream rouge, lipstick, eyeshadow, eyebrow pencil, inching lotion, skin tonic and a foundation cream. Incidentally, the foundation cream is the featured item. Easy to speed on the skin, this forms a perfect base for rouge and powder

CRUISE TO NOWHERE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JANE WESTON feels her dream has come true when she sets out on a three-week ocean cruise. She resolved her ticket in place of the salary due her when the travel magazine employing her as a typical suspended publication, a fine heard Jane meets handsome DIRK STROM who has been sailing at Lake Placid. He introduces her to his friend, SNOWSHOES, a detective. Snowshoes tells them that NORA LANE, famous actress, is on board. Mike Lane, owner of the famous Klokian diamond, and it is known that she usually has it with her.

Now go on with the story

CHAPTER V

DIRK STROM folded his expensive tweeds and hung them up carefully on hangers in a closet. He went to his traveling bag and took out the new white linen for the tropical phase of this cruise.

"How can I fill up a three-room suite with the contents of one bag?" he said, half-aloud, and laughed at himself in the mirror. "Here I am on a de luxe cruise in the most expensive suite," he mused. "It's more than a bridal suite. The bellhop said it was the royal suite. The King of Siam used it on his last transatlantic crossing. Who'd ever have thought it? One year ago today I was marooned out in the High Sierras, and had never seen a big ship. Nor a street car," he added, smiling. "Nor a building higher than the three-story saloon in Truckee."

Dirk got out his safety razor, and took it inside the green-tiled bathroom, intending to shave before dinner. He had two hours to kill before 8 o'clock.

Then he took a silver trophy from his bag, and placed it on view on a stand in the big sitting room. He paused to admire it. It was the figure of a ski jumper poised in a mad flight through the air—symbolic of Dirk's victory in a ski jumping competition at Lake Placid.

Dirk went back into the bedroom and began to undress. When he stood by the bed in shorts and athletic, he ran a hand in his pants pockets and began to count his money, tinging it down on the covers. "Five dollars and sixty-two cents!" he said, aloud.

Dirk Strom had spent 20 years in an isolated mining town high up in the Sierras of California, self-educated in arithmetic as well as in skiing. Way back there in the eighties his father, a Norwegian, had been imported—as the day—for the task of carrying the mail to isolated mining camps on skis.

THROUGHOUT the nine months of isolation in the high Sierras snows, skis were the only practicable means of running swiftly over the ground from post to post. Old Lars had frozen to death in the blizzard of 1921, and his wife, a sturdy Norwegian, had taken his job until Dirk was old enough to become the pack animal and postman on the hazardous, sky-high route.

Then one day a celebrated skier had seen him jumping on the rude bill at Truckee, and, observing his style and terrific distance leaps, had sent him on an exhibition tour of the Rockies, the midwest and the east with all expenses paid.

It was the man who had been following Dirk and Jane earlier. Instinctively Dirk bared the entrance.

Now, on board the S. S. Oceanic, Dirk sat down in a chair and began to massage the tendons in a leg.

He had injured the leg in a fall on his skis at Lake Placid, and it had cost him a coveted place on the American Olympic team this year. A little girl of five had run out on the jumping hill, to the path of his downward flight on skis. He had landed safely and was speeding straight toward the child at 60 or 70 miles an hour when he took the spill to avoid hurting her. He had rolled over and over and landed against a post.

With an injured leg he couldn't make the trip to Europe with the Olympic squad, and it was a bitter disappointment. "The father of the child whose life he had saved had showered wealthy intentions on Dirk, all of which he refused except the one—a letter to a prominent ski manufacturer who accepted Dirk's new design for skis and gave him a job in a hickory sawmill down south where all the skis came from.

But when the doctor said it'd be a wise thing for Dirk to do a lot of sitting down and baking his leg in the sun, he accepted this offer of a cruise under a tropic sun.

Now, as he went into the bath room to shave, Dirk sniffed at his royal suite. The child's grateful father had ordered the best! Even the expensive tweeds and white linens had been part of the wealthy man's idea of a cruise; they had been forced on him.

Dirk put his razor away, and came out into the bedroom to dress. But when he had finished he picked out a small slab of hickory from his suitcase and began to whittle on it. It looked like a small model of a ski—which it undoubtedly was. He was busily engaged in the work he liked most in the world when a knock came at the door.

"Hello?" Dirk said, low, to himself. "Who can this be?"

When he opened the door a man with sleek black hair stood outside. Dirk saw his furtive glance about the suite, and noted the shifty expression in blue eyes. It was the man who had been following him and Jane earlier.

INSTINCTIVELY Dirk let his frame bar entrance. "Yes?" he said.

Even as the intruder spoke his eyes ceaselessly roved about objects in the suite, taking in everything.

"I beg your pardon," he said, bowing with an exaggerated gesture of politeness. "I guess I made a mistake." He stepped back and looked at the number on the door. "Suite 4A. That was a bum steer the steward gave me. I was looking for a—lady."

"Don't mind me. I'm not a forward guy. Name's Mannie Jackson. There's a friendly little game going on downstairs. Craps—they got it stacked up like a mint in there. But I don't like the odds. I came on this cruise to get a little shut-eye. Wouldn't care to have a drink on me at the bar before dinner? Aren't you lonely up here?"

Dirk hesitated. It all sounded harmless enough. And it was a pretty dull prospect—sitting around whittling on a stick when there might be something lively going on in the bar.

IN the back of his mind he kept saying: "This bird is up to something. I may as well see what's on his mind now. I don't want him prowling around here at night."

He went out on deck with Mannie Jackson, and they made their way through the swarm of men in the bar.

Mannie seemed to have sized him up accurately from the appearance of his suite, for he said: "You don't look like one of these Broadway playboys—too much shoulder and flat—but you got a bridal suite on this cruise, and no bride. What's your racket?" he added.

"I haven't got a job at all, just now," Dirk said. "I'm only a ski jumper, with a bad leg."

They ordered drinks. "Oh, one of those things in the news reels," Mannie said. "I don't want to be personal. But you could go places—a young guy with a pan like yours."

"What's the matter with it?" Dirk said.

"You got it," Mannie said. "Looks and class with it. There's a lot of easy dough for smart guys in this world." He reached in a pocket, and showed him a picture of the actress, Nora Lane. "Now you take a dame like this one. She's on board. Now, if I was a guy like you I'd get to know her."

Dirk looked at him sharply, but Mannie assumed a confidential tone. "She's traveling under a false name. Nobody knows where her suite is, even. I've seen her on the stage, and I could recognize her."

Dirk thought swiftly. "So that's it! He came to my rooms looking for the actress. Because it was the largest suite. They'll find her, sooner or later."

He said, scoffing: "Nora Lane wouldn't know me. Why, she's famous!"

The conversation lagged, and Dirk looked about for an excuse to be rid of this sleek young man. His eyes pounced upon the bald spot of Snowshoes' back. He lifted a hand, and Snowshoes came forward him. Mannie Jackson stood up, and excused himself quickly.

"I'll see you later," he said. "Dirk," He paid the bartender and slipped away from the bar just as Snowshoes came up.

"I see you're consorting with the jungle," Snowshoes said. "I don't get you!"

"That snake who just left you, he's one of the few that ain't in captivity—yet. I've seen him to police court somewhere. Can't remember where. Shall we have another drink and go down to dinner? I want to show you some more of the jungle beasts that ain't put in zoos yet."

LETTERS to the Editor

This is your newspaper. Write to it. Letters criticizing the editorial policy or commenting upon facts in the news columns, are equally welcome. Choose a topic everyone will be interested in. Be brief. Avoid personal abuse. The world's greatest critics were painfully polite. Every writer must sign his name and address.

O. C. Story
Editor The Star: I thank you very much for printing my article on the whisky question.

You got the article right, but made a bad mistake in my name. You have it "O. C. Story," when it should have been O. C. Story. Will you please correct this?

I congratulate you in printing both sides of the question in such an impartial manner.

That looks fair.

Then it is up to the people.

From a Lady

Editor The Star: I hope you will find space for these few words. Whisky is the present day's topic. It does not bother me, nor my family. I have a husband and three sons, who care nothing for it; but we need to be sensible on this question. We need the tax, and we are going to have the whisky—dry or wet.

During the dry era I lived 20 months in the south part of town. There was a "blind tiger" operated on South Main just two blocks from our high school. I did not hear a single church member or preacher complaining about it. Our young people could stop and did buy the stuff right on Main street in our little city of Hope. Just think of that!

I never lived in such torment in all my life and I hope I never shall again. There were many, many nights I did not sleep at all. Men, women, boys and girls drunk, cursing, fighting, stealing and terrorizing the whole community—yet we had no "law" or money to pay on.

There was more money paid to catch bootleggers than it required to enforce all other laws. How are you going to catch them without money? Our schools are far from being what they should be. Our county is broke. Yet people want to turn the "devil" loose on the whole county. Why not keep "him" in a package and let "him" help educate our little children who are to be our future citizens, instead of us paying every cent we get to an officer to be chasing "him" when we know he will never be caught?

Parents should teach their children that the stuff is damnable to soul, mind and body, instead of having a bridge party and serving cocktails, then go to church and have a party in God's house which is supposed to be a house of prayer.

Religion and politics will not mix. My mother (God bless her) taught me that no lady drank whisky, and I am still a lady.

Should you print this please without hold my name as my husband depends on the public for our livelihood.

U. G. Garrett

Editor The Star: Within the past few weeks, covering a lot of space and various phases of a certain subject, our local editor has exposed to his reading public just about all he doesn't know.

It was left, however to a brief sheet that we hardly know existed, to publish the climactic liquor episode. It was signed: "Hempstead County Friends of Legalized Liquor."

But here's the funny part you know Mr. Washburn (and others) has been telling us that during prohibition there was as much (and, indeed more) liquor in circulation than now.

And what do you know about it? Here come the "friends of legalized liquor" and let several of their own as well as Mr. Washburn's cats out of the bag.

Of course we know the boys didn't aim to do it; just a matter of forgetting to pull the mental drawstring, or something.

But wait now, they made known to us and to Mr. Washburn that there was not only not as much liquor to be had during prohibition, but an actual shortage of same.

Or, to quote the boys: "Emergency Cases" you know; cases when they couldn't get liquor a lot of times when they wanted it. Well, well!

And then they go on to tell us and Mr. Washburn that during these frequent "emergency cases" why, they'd be forced—forced, mind you—to take into their delicate beings anything from "anti-freeze" to "oxblood shoe polish." Tsk! tsk!

We've wondered a long, long time just what peculiar and foreign "matter" reposed in the upper stories of "Friends of Liquor" (legalized or otherwise).

This liquor article to which we have special reference, began thus:

"While you are talking about the coming election February 18, we wonder if it would be possible for us men to express our opinion without being condemned to hell and all damnation?"

Well, not by us, certainly. We don't (now or ever) purpose to take out of God's hands that business to which He pleases can attend.

And assuredly it is God's business as well as His purpose to "consign" certain number of people to hell and all damnation, one of these days.

Notice I say "consign." God nor man doesn't "condemn" you to hell or any where else.

If you're on your way to that vastly "tropic climate" you have but one fellow to blame and you may meet him face to face by looking in a mirror.

Listen: "He that believeth on Him is NOT condemned!"

But listen again: "But he that believeth NOT is CONDEMNED ALREADY!"

Why, my Liquor Friends, According to your recent article you would have us believe that it is because the serious thinking people of the land have raised their voices against a vile fluid and its terrible, unspeakable influence and results.

But there is another story: A story with all the authority of Heaven behind it. It reads like this:

"Because he hath NOT BELIEVED in the name of the only begotten Son of God."

So, if you stand condemned today, don't blame it on God or the prohibitionists. Just point the finger of blame at the quilly fellow, and it will somewhat startle you to find it land on your own nose.

There is a standard—a rigid standard by which we all may determine just where we stand—it is contained in a wonderful volume known as "The Book" (The Bible). Menus yourself, sometime.

Furthermore, "Friends of Liquor" challenge with all my sense of right and justice two statements contained in your absurd article, namely:

"That the liquor stores would close their doors for lack of trade, if 'church' members ceased to patronize them; and"

"That 'There is nobody but the bootleggers, lawyers and preachers to want prohibition.'"

To each statement I have this all sufficient answer:—No! and all that shall have their part in the lake while burneth with fire and brimstone (Rev. 21:8).

I do not presume to say that they are no church members who drink liquor. But I do say that the above quoted statement regarding their drinking is too elasticized for even a half-wit's acceptance.

And I do state further, that church members who pad a path to liquor stores, are church members in "name" only.

The Bible gives us full particulars as to the habits of true children of God; and believe it or not—frequent trips to the liquor store (or bottle) is NOT one of THEM.

"By their fruits ye shall know them."

There are many apparently "nice sheep" within our churches that one day the hand of an erstwhile patient God shall reach out and snatch away the sheep-covering only to reveal the ravening "wolf" beneath.

And those of you who make a special outdoor as well as indoor sport of "WATCHING" church members, had better tear your concentrated gaze away from the "wolf" element of it long enough to see, not only a "sheep" within, but to look even farther, to a rugged crest upon a hill, where one day, a "lamb, without spot or blemish" shed His blood for you, liquor cursed souls.

The Few

The easy roads are crowded. And the level roads are jammed. The pleasant little rivers. With the drifting folks are crammed. But you get a better view. You will find the ranks are thinning. The travelers are few. Where the going is smooth and pleasant. The easy roads are crowded. You will always find the throng. For the many, more is the pity. Seem to like to drift along. But the steps that call for courage. And the task that's hard to do. In the end result in glory. For the never-wavering few.

Willbur Jones and Miss Mary Carlin were elected alternate delegates to the annual state conference of Daughters of the American Revolution in El Dorado March 11 and 12. Mrs. Lee Holt read the president's message from the D. A. R. magazine. Mrs. W. H. Arnold of Texarkana, who was state regent at the time the John Chin chapter was formed was introduced as the guest speaker, bringing a most interesting message based on "The Pioneer Women of Arkansas." She paid tribute to them in the high-est terms, and stated that so little of the story of heroic devotion and sacrifice has been preserved for posterity, that she felt this Centennial year should mark the beginning of a movement to invite and preserve their history, as heretofore it has been available almost entirely through tradition and word of mouth. She recounted interesting events of her childhood in Columbus county, and dwelt largely on the meager educational and spiritual advantages of the day. She recalled the untiring efforts and splendid work of the late Rev. T. W. Hayes, father of Mrs. K. G. McRae and Mrs. Margaret Marshall, a relative of Mrs. R. M. LaGrone, who left the indelible imprint of their sterling character on the lives of the children who were under their care, and whose lives and works are being carried forward by the chapter to this time. Guests of the chapter and individual members for the occasion included Mrs. Arnold, Mrs. C. M. LaGrone, Mrs. J. C. Carlton, D. A. R. Texarkana, Texas; Mrs. D. R. Mitchell and Mrs. C. A. Archer, DeQueen; Mrs. Brooks Shultz and Sprague; Mrs. L. A. Foster; Mrs. R. C. Lester; Mrs. Chas. Bentley; Mrs. R. D. Franklin; Mrs. J. C. Carlton; Mrs. P. G. Ward; Mrs. Finley Ward; Mrs. R. T. Bryant; Miss Maggie Bell; Miss Evelyn Hupph; Hope, and Mrs. Robert Stewart of Vicksburg, Miss. The regent announced that Mrs. A. L. Elack, Mrs. Frank R. Johnson and Mrs. Hattie Ann Reid would be hostesses for the March meeting, at which time, Mrs. Chas. Bentley would present a program on National Defense. The meeting adjourned and many of those present accepted the invitation of the Friday Music club to attend a silver tea at the home of Mrs. James G. Martindale.

Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Smyth and Mrs. Bernice Buchanan were Sunday guests of Mr. Buchanan who is a patient in the Cora Dannel hospital in Prescott.

The many friends of Frank Hutchins will be pleased to learn that he is reported as much improved from an extended illness at his home on East Division street.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Talley have returned from a week's visit with relatives in Shreveport, La., and other Louisiana points.

Miss Charlene Crane has returned from a week's vacation with home folks in Ozan and Shreveport, La.

The regular meeting of the John Chin chapter, D. A. R. was postponed from the scheduled date on February 12 until Saturday February 15, when a luncheon-meeting was held in the private dining room of Hotel Barlow. Mrs. R. T. White and Mrs. J. M. Houston were in charge of the program and arrangements. The hollow square dining table was centered with a large vase of gorgeous red tulips placed on a stand. Small globular vases held matching tulips at each corner of the table, the beauty of which was further enhanced by delicate vines of hot house Southern smilax. Place cards carried motifs directing attention to the fact that this is the birthday month of two great Americans, Washington and Lincoln. Dainty corsages marked the places of Mrs. Arnold, Miss Twitchell and Miss Murphy. The opening ritual was led by the regent, Miss Mamie Twitchell, who also introduced Miss Evelyn Murphy, who delighted her audience with two groups of soprano solos. She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. T. White. During the business session, it was announced that a committee composed of Mrs. Gus Haynes, chairman of good citizenship committee; Mrs. O. A. Graves, first vice president of the Arkansas Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Miss Beryl Henry, superintendent of Hope Public Schools had sponsored the selection of a Hope High School Senior girl for the good citizenship award, and that Miss Sam Lou Ledbetter had been given the honor. Miss Ledbetter will compete with high school honorees from the different schools of the district and state, the winner in the finals to be awarded a trip to Washington, D. C., where she will represent Arkansas at the 1936 D. A. R. congress. Mrs. Lee Holt, treasurer, reported the payment of annual dues and the meeting of all national and state officers. Mrs. Chas. Locke, Mrs. J. J. Battle, Mrs. Kline Snyder and Miss Mamie Twitchell were elected delegates and Mrs. J. M. Houston, Mrs. Lee Holt, Mrs.

Bodecaw Champions Here for a Game

Will Take 31-Game Streak Against Hope Bobcats Monday Night

The 31-game winning streak of the Bodecaw High School basketball team will be at stake here Monday night when the Nevada county champions come here for a game with the Hope High School team.

The game is expected to attract one of the largest crowds of the season, including a large delegation from Bodecaw.

The doors at the high school building will open shortly after 7 p. m. and the game gets underway at 7:30 o'clock.

Heartened by the return to the lineup of Reece, Hope forward who has been ill, the Bobcats will be in the best of condition for what looms as one of the hardest contests thus far.

The Bodecaw team has one of the best quintets in its history, featuring Goodwin, center, a lanky lad who stands six feet and five inches.

Goodwin is the kingpin of the team. Reliable reports from Bodecaw say that he has averaged 25 points per game this season.

As a preliminary to the Hope-Bodecaw battle, a contest has been arranged between Patinos and Centerpoint High Schools.

League Proposed for the Americas

Pan-American Group May Rival Original League of Geneva

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Visions of a Pan-American League of Nations, possibly supplementing or rivaling the world League at Geneva, followed Sunday the call by President Roosevelt for a conference of American republics in Buenos Aires at an early date.

To congressional leaders who have advocated strong co-operation between the United States and other American nations the conference sounded promising.

"Wonderful," said Senator King, Democrat, Utah, a League of Nations supporter. Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, foe of the League, declared there was "much to be said" for any proposal to bring the Monroe doctrine forward on a co-operative basis.

to believe it. They want us to believe that these poison sellers are such good and dependable men that they would not have stolen this man's money.

If they did, the position of the wets is that the law against theft should be abolished so that the poison sellers will be within the law when they knock the man over the head with an empty bottle, and while he is unconscious, take his money from him.

Of course it would not be theft then, for there would be no law on the subject. This is their position exactly.

Every law that is anti-social which is liable to trouble the officers of the law should be abolished. This is the wet position exactly. They know so much more about getting people up out of the mire of slum and social crime than those who are dedicating their lives to the task, that it is an increasing wonder to them that all decent preachers and teachers should not run to them for their advice.

When Jesus Christ goes to Caiaphas the right priest to learn how to attack and overthrow evil it will be time for all prohibitionists to turn to the apologists of these poison vendors for a plan for the overthrow of this traffic in poison. Let those who are minded to vote against this destroyer of happiness and home do their own thinking in the right of Jesus Christ and his teaching, and we will put to confusion these vampires on the eighteenth of this month.

northern barrier to an advance and was in its strongest northern position.

The movement involved seven Italian divisions and two army corps, a total of 65,000 men, all white. The fighting was terrific with the casualties still uncertain.

Italian estimates of their own dead, all white troops, are under 500 with about 1,000 badly wounded. An estimate of Ethiopian casualties was 4,000 or 5,000 dead and 15,000 wounded.

The movement was carried out despite a heavy rain during all of six days. This added greatly to the difficulties of the tortuous mountain country.

The victory not only opened vast territories here but probably will force Ras Seyoum, Ethiopian leader in the north, to evacuate the Tombian area immediately before the Italians bottle up his forces by closing the rear along the Zuluca plateau, south of the Gabat river.

The threat of both Ethiopian armies in the north appears lifted, and in view of the coming rainy season the action of the past six days may be the last serious fighting before September.

... TOBACCO that is cured just right by the farmer—flue-cured, air-cured or sun-cured to seal in its good aroma and flavor.

... TOBACCO that is aged and mellowed in hogsheads or bales for two years or more until free from harshness or bite.

That is the kind of tobacco we use for Chesterfields—mild, ripe tobacco, cured just right and aged for flavor and taste.
